Last Friday, a 49-year-old Singaporean worker was crushed to death by a container at the Pioneer Bend container transfer station. This accident is the 30th fatal accident in the workplace this year and is the same as the total number of workplace deaths for the entire year last year.

Yang Yicai, assistant secretary-general of the National Workers Union, expressed deep sorrow in a Facebook post yesterday, and pointed out: "These fatal accidents in the workplace are not just statistics. Workers who lost their lives left their relatives and were raising children, there are also many questions that need to be answered."
