A port worker in his 40s was hit by a trailer carrying containers and died.

On the 12th, at the Incheon Container Terminal (ICT) in Incheon South Port, a container trailer driver A (52) struck and killed a port worker B (42).

The Incheon Central Police Station announced on the 14th that it will investigate Mr.

Person A said to the police, "When turning right at the intersection, I did not find Mr. B." The deceased person B was on his way to work that night.

The police said, "The accident occurred at a workplace, not a road, and the Road Traffic Act does not apply."

The Incheon Container Terminal, where the accident occurred, is operated by PSA, Singapore's world-class port operator. B, who died, is not an employee of the Incheon Container Terminal and subcontractor, which is the original contractor, but a worker of a fixing company.

The central government office of employment and labor said that it is not subject to the Serious Accident Punishment Act. The police explained that the trailer driver, Mr. A, is an employee of a subcontractor and is subject to criminal punishment for negligent manslaughter on the job.

An official from the Jungbu Regional Labor Office said, "Mr B is not affiliated with the Incheon Container Terminal's main contractor or subcontractor, so it seems that this company is not subject to the Serious Accident Punishment Act."
