After a serious accident during loading work on a seagoing ship in Bremerhaven, a 30-year-old port worker died in the hospital.

Bremerhaven – A 30-year-old was seriously injured during loading work in Bremerhaven on Saturday and succumbed to his injuries on Sunday. Several port workers were busy on Saturday with loading work on board the almost 200-meter-long cargo ship, the police said on Monday.

The 30-year-old got caught between a moving excavator and the load for reasons that were initially unclear. He suffered serious injuries and was taken to the hospital. He died there on Sunday. The investigations by the water police in Bremen into the cause of the accident are ongoing.
