The fatal accident was confirmed by the Puerto Coronel company through a statement, where it was reported that the incident occurred in one of the docks while the workers were unloading coal.

Two dock workers died after suffering an accident inside a ship carrying coal in the commune of Coronel, Biobío Region, this Monday afternoon.

The Puerto Coronel company confirmed this fatal accident through a press release, which was recorded at one of the docks while the workers were unloading coal.

The deceased workers are Fabián Garay and Alejandro Camaño.

The company reported that they are in contact with the affected families and stated that they regret the accident. They also indicated that the corresponding investigation was initiated and that Puerto Coronel will provide all the necessary collaboration.

For its part, the Coronel Communal Port Union mourned the death of these compañeros, and announced the suspension of work "today on the third shift and tomorrow on the first shift."

"In a meeting that will be held tomorrow morning between company leaders and executives, the operational continuity will be evaluated," they said.
