

Crushed worker dies inside the Port of Veracruz

The fatal accident occurred inside the port area, where a heavy load fell on a worker. Authorities investigate the causes of this mishap

By MARCELO L. BERMUDEZ Written in VERACRUZ on 7/15/2024 · 8:59 p.m. Last update:15/7/2024 · 21:43 hs

VERACRUZ, VER. - In the early morning of Monday, July 15, a tragic accident was recorded in the port enclosure of the city of Veracruz that resulted in the death of a young employee. Antonio de Jesús J. A., 23 years old, a worker from Transnational Specialized Ports Petra, died when several tons of stored corn came out of the grain silo and crushed him while he was doing his work.

According to data from authorities, the accident occurred unexpectedly, and Antonio's companions immediately ran to try to rescue him, but unfortunately they could not withdraw the tons of corn. The rescue bodies of the port enclosure arrived at the scene of the events, only to confirm that the port worker no longer had vital signs.

The area was cordoned off by elements of public security, while officers of the Ministerial Police entered the area to interview the witnesses and determine how the events occurred. Finally, the staff of the management of expert services carried out the removal of the body, which will be delivered to the victim's relatives.

The authorities continue the investigations to determine the corresponding legal responsibilities and clarify the causes of the tragic accident that has bereaved the port community.