For a 62-year-old dock worker in Rostock, any help came too late

Serious accident in the Rostock overseas port: A 62-year-old worker gets caught on a ship between the trailers of a moving truck and the side wall.

An employee of the port of Rostock died in an accident on a Dutch transport ship on Monday. As the police and public prosecutor's office announced today, the 62-year-old probably got into the trailer and was fatally injured during the driving maneuver of a truck and was fatally injured.

The accident on the roll on/roll off ship (RoRo ship) therefore occurred in the morning around 11.30 a.m. A proceeding for negligent killing was initiated against unknown persons. The investigation is still at the beginning, so more details could not be provided at first.
