A video is circulating on digital platforms in which you can see the exact moment in which a worker dies after being accidentally crushed by a forklift or reach stacker in a port terminal in Indonesia, so, as expected, the shocking images of this unfortunate work accident went viral and originated all kinds of opinions about what happened.

These events occurred at 3:21 p.m. on Thursday, February 26 in a port warehouse located in the coastal area of Marunda, in Jakarta in North, Indonesia and the unfortunate scene was recorded on video thanks to the security cameras located in that port.

In the video that circulates on digital platforms it can be seen that the worker was walking between an area where the huge containers that arrive at the aforementioned port area are stacked and while this was happening a truck that was loading a container passed very close to where it was, which, apparently was a factor for the driver of a forklift or reach stacker not to notice the presence of the subject, so he continued on his way without stopping and it was here where one of the huge tires hit the man from behind knocking him down, so the heavy unit He passed over him, taking his life immediately, it should be noted that the man did not realize that the heavy unit was approaching because he was walking with his back to it

In the recording it can also be seen that the driver of the huge forklift did not realize that he had run over a man because he continued with his work as if nothing had happened during the following seconds until personnel on the ground told him what had happened, however, it was already too late because the run-over worker was torn apart on the asphalt folder.

After these events, the police chief of the coastal area of Marunda, Bobi Susasri, pointed out that the victim of this unfortunate work accident was 44 years old and that everything seems to indicate that he was an employee of a ship that was unloading containers, so he did not know the operation of the place and because of that he put himself in a vulnerable situation, however, in the same way an investigation will be developed to establish exactly how the events occurred and be able to delimit responsibilities.

On the other hand, it was reported that the driver of the huge forklift was under police custody and it is known that in his first statements he claimed not to have seen the worker he ran over because apparently he was positioned in a blind spot for his position, however, his legal situation will be determined once the investigations are concluded.

As mentioned before, the video of this unfortunate work accident went viral on digital platforms and quickly became a topic of debate as Internet users began to speculate about who had the most responsibility for these tragic events.
